

THIS PRINCE AND BEGGAR GIRL STORY DOES NOT END LIKE STORY BOOK TALES

London, Nov. 1.—Details of the love tragedy of Prince Leopold of Coburg, nephew of King Ferdinand of Bulgaria, and beautiful Lottie Rybichka in Vienna are given by the correspondent at Budapest of Lloyd's Weekly. The report of the girl's death is confirmed. The prince is still living.

Prince Leopold who was 37, and the girl, 18, met two years ago at a social function. They fell in love. The prince convinced the girl that he would be able to overcome the inexorable rule against the marriage of a member of the royal family to a commoner.

The opposition of the girl's father, who is a high official of the Austrian state police, and her mother led Miss Hybichka to leave her home and travel with the prince throughout the country.

Finally the couple took apartments in Vienna. On Oct. 14 the girl ordered the servants not to return until 8 o'clock, saying that she expected the prince at 5. The prince, on arriving at the house, ordered his chauffeur to return at 7.

At 6 o'clock a soldier passing the house heard revolver shots. With the porter he hurried into the flat. They heard a faint cry: "Fetch the locksmith; the keys are missing."

The men forced an entrance and found the girl lying in a big arm chair with her head thrown back, dead. The prince was lying on the floor with four bullet wounds, one of which had pierced a lung. He held a handkerchief to his face shouting: "I am blind! I am blind!"

Prince Leopold was hurried to a hospital, where it was found that he was suffering from vitriol thrown into his face. One eye was removed and the other is dangerously injured. He may die.

The reconstructed story is that the girl, learning that the prince was ordered to the front, urged their marriage before his departure. The prince futilely endeavored to obtain his father's consent. His efforts in this direction failing, the prince offered the girl half a million kronen as a recompense. She declined to accept it.

The prince then pointed out that marriage was impossible and tried to break off relations with the girl in obedience to his father's orders.

Seeing the hopelessness of her plight the girl threw vitriol in the prince's face and followed the acid with shots from a revolver which she had kept concealed. Then she turned the weapon on herself.

KILL PROFESSORS AND MEN—TAKE GIRLS TO HAREMS

Boston, Nov. 1.—Four professors of the Euphrates American college, founded by American missionaries at Harpoot, Armenia, tortured by Turks before being put to death, according to letter made public here today by Rev. Robert Keating Smith of Westfield, Mass. Hair and mustache of one professor pulled out by roots. Nails of another pulled out with pin-cers.

Seven-eighths of students deported, killed or exiled and young girls carried away to harems. Letter was written by American connected with college and was addressed to Bishop Casparian, Boston. It is dated July 19, 1915, but name of writer is withheld in fear that he may be hunted and killed by Turks.

Fourteen professors were engaged in instructing in American ideas 150 Armenian students, two-thirds of them girls, when war broke out, it was stated. Turkish authorities took over seven of eight buildings of the school.
